Munich, July 16, 2020 | In its tenth year, Munich Creative Business Week (MCBW) is zeroing in on the future: Shaping futures by Design is the new slogan of the largest design event in Germany. The slogan is reflected in the key visual created for the event, epitomizing the encounter of evolution and future, nature and technology. This relationship is worthy of much attention because it has the potential for innovation and at the same time, it is extremely vulnerable. Thus, mankind has a special responsibility to ensure the success of this relationship.

“How will we want to live tomorrow? When it comes to answering this question, designers across disciplines play an important role as they propose ideas, develop processes and structures and/or shape living environments and relationships. A future worth living is created in environments in which mindsets and design are attentive, responsible, and sustainable. The COVID-19 pandemic has demonstrated the importance of being agile and flexible in today’s world and using our gift for innovation to develop new ‘futures.’ This is one of the reasons why the slogan of MCBW 2021 is Shaping futures by Design,” says Dr. Silke Claus, Managing Director of the organizer, bayern design. Focus will be on the future – Future of Health, Future of Security, Future of Work, Future of Education, Future of Communication, and Future of Cities. These themes will set the course for the content of the program.

Established in 1927, designaustria is the third oldest design organization in Europe. Its members, currently more than 1400 active in diverse fields, see design as the main driver of innovation and thus a key factor in society’s development and economic success. As MCBW 2021’s cooperation partner, designaustria plans to make the close ties between Bavaria and Austria more visible and to intensify and cultivate these ties with the goal of expanding the excellent neighborly relationship.
